Aloha commissioners,

I'm writing today to ask that you vote against giving this landowner the green light for an extension of their development permit. I am very concerned that this developer has made no progress on a proposed and promised project in the ten years they were given to do so. Additionally, there seem to be some hidden issues with the ownership of the company which is also of concern to me and which should also give this commission pause before entering into another agreement with them.

Times and situations in West Hawai'i change over a decade. Booms and busts, changing — often increasingly lagging -- infrastructure, increased population growth, and new, smarter guidelines for development like the regional community development plans created during that time.

A decade is long enough for this company to have fulfilled promises and to come clean regarding company ownership. It's time to go back to the drawing board to insure that any project proposal for this property will take the newer conditions, planning paradigms and needs of the community — including being forthright about company ownership — into consideration.

Mahalo for your attention to my views on this important matter.
